I. Economic Developments and Banking System, 2012

1. General Outlook

1.1. Global Economy

The high level of public debt and fragilities in finance sector of many developed countries and particularly in the European Union (EU) have generated serious risks and uncertainties within the international economic activities. Lower level of risk appetite decelerated the speed of international trade volume and had a negative impact on the global economic activities. Growth rate, even lower than the modest forecasts, restricted the growth rate of the developing countries as well.

On the other hand, thanks to more concrete recent steps taken to reduce the possibility of emergence of a systemic risk in the finance sector in the EU countries in the second half of 2012, the trend towards a chronic recession was halted, and even a relative improvement was noted during the last quarter of the year.

Along with the slowdown in economic activities, the global trade volume has also lost its momentum. According to International Monetary Fund (IMF) data, consistent with the slowdown in the economic activities, international trade volume growth rate decelerated to 2.8 percent, a ratio considerably lower against the 20-year growth rate average of 5.2 percent announced by World Trade Organization (WTO).

According to IMF data for 2012, the public debt to gdp ratio was amounted to 111 percent in developed countries and 35 percent in developing countries.

Due to low level of investment, unemployment has continued to rise. In 2012, more than 4 million people were unemployed and the number is expected to rise to 5.1 million in 2013 according to Global Employment 2013 Report. The global unemployment rate is expected to remain at high level until 2017.

Delay in the recovery of economic activities has caused a serious rise in unemployment particularly in the economies of developed countries. According to IMF estimates, unemployment in developed countries in 2012 is to coast along 7.9 percent, a level above the world average.

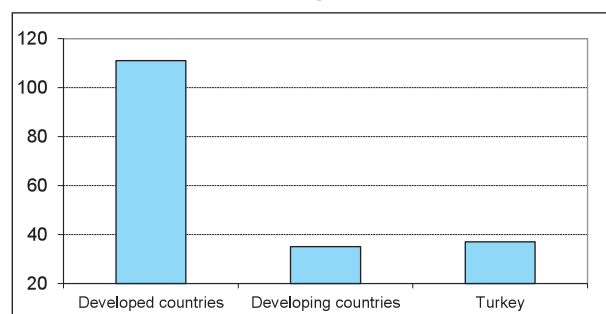

High risks and uncertainties delayed the recovery in global trade and growth.

Rise in global unemployment.

Central banks in developed countries have continued to supply liquidity to the markets, and announced that they would keep interests at low rates for a long time yet to come.

Monetary expansion continued, and interest rates remained at low levels.

The European Central Bank (ECB) kept monetary policy loose and accommodative in the second half of 2012 aimed to eliminate the emergence of a systemic risk due to high rate of public debts threatening the Euro region. Resolutions were declared on the establishment of an efficient supervisory mechanism by the formation of a banking union among the Euro region countries, founding a growth fund, adding flexibility to the bail-out fund and authorizing the European Stability Mechanism (ESM) to intervene directly on the capitalization of banks. The so-called "fiscal cliff", which was expected to bring flexibility to the political preferences on tight fiscal policy to be taken in the United States (USA) could lead the USA economy to a severe recession, and consequently intensify the global crisis was postponed towards the end of last year.

EU announced comprehensive measures aimed at stabilizing the financial sector.

The latest developments in Japan, as well as the Euro region and USA will have pivotal roles in the determination of the global economic outlook in 2013. Estimates are indicative of acceleration in the global growth rate. The IMF has forecasted a 3.5 percent growth for the world economy, 5.5 percent for developing countries and 1.4 percent for developed countries. Expectations for the EU are along the lines of a very slight contraction or a growth somewhere near zero proximity.

Expectations for 2013

1.2. Turkish Economy

Gross Domestic Product (gdp) growth rate, in 2012, having declined by 6.6 points in comparison to the year before, was 2.2 percent. The contribution of domestic demand in growth was considerably weak while the exports kept increasing. Measures taken in monetary and banking policies restricting the quantity of bank loans, aimed at reducing the growth rate of domestic demand, consequently have had a considerable significant role in the deceleration of the economic growth.

Measures taken to be hedged from global risks proved to be effective; growth slowed down, and savings deficit diminished.

In 2012, the ratio of domestic savings to gdp was registered as 14.3 percent. The savings rate decreased in the public sector while increased in the private sector in 2012.

As the ratio of savings deficit to gdp declined to 7.0 percent, an important part of the deficit originated from the private sector.

The ratio of savings deficit to gdp increased in the public sector, while it contracted in the private sector.

Unemployment rate in 2012 stayed at about 10 percent, at the same level a year before. The drop in unemployment was halted both in urban and rural areas.

Consistent with economic slowdown, the budget deficit had increased, albeit slightly. The ratio of budget deficit to gdp realized as 2 percent. The ratio of the borrowing requirement of the public sector to gdp rose from 0.1 percent in 2011 to 1.7 percent in 2012.

Monetary policy was kept rather tight in the first half of 2012 for the purpose of reducing the gap between expectation for inflation and the targeted level and deceleration of the economic activity.

In the second half of the year, improvements observed both in global markets and inflation forecasts, along with slowdown in the growth rate laid the room for a quantitative easing scheme and a reduction in the cost of borrowing.

Usage of the facility of holding Turkish lira required reserves in foreign exchange or in gold, and also the adoption of the reserve option coefficient as of June 2012, have in particular resulted in a rapid increase in the reserves of the Central Bank. Foreign exchange reserves in the Central Bank increased by 28 percent in 2012 yearend to USD 100 billion from USD 78 billion in 2011. Net foreign currency position totaled as USD 44billion.

Inflation that ran in parallel within the 9-10 percent bandwidth for majority of the year realized at 6.2 percent by the yearend on account of the slowdown in the domestic demand and the drop in the prices of non-processed food during the last quarter of the year. This rate was the lowest ever recorded in the past 44 years.

Fx adjusted loan growth decelerated to 16 percent during the first three quarters of the year, concluding at 18 percent in the last quarter.

Current account deficit, contracted by 37 percent, and arrived at 6 percent of the gdp. Fall in the domestic demand, contribution of gold exports and deceleration in the growth rate, were effective in the overall shrinkage of the current accounts deficit.

Unemployment rate remained unchanged.

Budget deficit increased, albeit slightly.

Loose monetary policy was implemented in the second half.

Inflation at its lowest level of the past 44 years.

Loan growth decelerated.

Current account deficit contracted.

External debt stock, increasing by 11 percent, reached USD 337 billion, so that the ratio of external debt to gdp, by an increase of 4.0 percent, ended as 42.0 percent. The public sector external debt to gdp ratio, increased by 1 percent, to 13 percent as of 2012 yearend.

According to IMF data, growth rate of the Turkish economy in 2012 was higher than the developed countries, but lower than the developing countries, due to slowdown in its economic activities originating from the efforts to stay within the frame of stable growth target.

As a result of the public authorities keeping an eye on foreign trade balances, export markets have been diversified so that the rate of increase in annual export volume in 2012 proved to be higher than that of the average for developing countries.

1.3. Banking Sector

Banking sector continued to grow and support the economic activities.

Basel II was put into effect as of July 2012. The impact of the initiation of Basel II was relatively slight on the capital adequacy ratio that concluded 2012 at 18.1 percent level.

Tight monetary policy and prudent banking measures caused some considerable slowdown in the growth rate of loans. In turn, growth in the amount of deposits was accelerated. The total assets to gdp ratio, increasing by 3 percent, expanded to reach 97 percent.

Share of Turkish Lira (TL) in the balance sheet increased to. 69 percent and 65 percent in total liabilities were based on TL.

Total loans in constant exchange rates by 2010 year-end have grown by 18 percent. The rate of growth was 21 percent of TL loans, and 9 percent in foreign currency denominated loans.

The loan portfolio continued to be highly diversified in kind. 67 percent of total loans were issued to corporations and the remaining 33 percent of the loans to consumers. By an increase of 2 percent, the share of credits issued to SMEs (Small and Medium Size Enterprises) reached 25 percent of the total.

The ratio of external debt to gdp increased.

2.5. Monetary Aggregates

2.5.1. Monetary Policy

Determinants of the monetary policy have been largely the uncertainties encountered in the global economy and the risk perception, accompanied by expansionary monetary policies implemented by the developed economies, and capital flows towards the developing countries, plus the balancing act in the domestic and foreign demand for the sake of financial stability and inflation targeting.

The Central Bank, during the last two years, implemented a policy combination focused on financial stability along with the inflation targeting, and developed new policy instruments within that frame. Uncertainties in the global markets continued throughout 2012. For the purpose of minimizing the possible negative effects caused by the volatility in capital flows, the Central Bank added the Reserve Option Mechanism (ROM) that enables allocating foreign exchanges and gold for a certain ratio of the required reserves in TL to its active monetary policy instruments.

In addition to ROM, the Central Bank, in order to minimize the cost differences between the required reserves in TL and in foreign exchange, and to allow the banks to freely use the facilities of ROM in line with their liquidity requirements, established ROC (Reserve Option Coefficients) that would determine the share of foreign exchange or gold that could be held in each of those required reserves in TL. ROC that would enable the required reserves in TL to be held in foreign exchange was put into effect in June 2012, and ROC that would allow the required reserves in TL to be held in gold became effective as of July 2012. The ROC allowing the required reserves in TL to be held in foreign exchange, through a variety of arrangements, was set in an increasing graduation within an interval of 1.4 to 2.4 for the first 40 percent and following 5 percent tranches, and the ROC for the required reserves that could be held in gold was set for an interval within the 1.2 and 2.2 range. In 2012, with the combined effect of raising the upper limits of required reserves in TL to be held in gold and foreign exchange within the scope of ROM, and starting the execution of ROC, the liquidity requirements of banks declined, and a decline was initiated in loan interest rates, running in parallel with the decline in the interest rates in the market.

The aim is to sterilize the capital flow, low rate of inflation, and balance in macroeconomic magnitudes.

The Central Bank tightened the monetary policy in the first half of 2012 on account of the inflation rate in 2011 having emerged above the target, and the current account deficit to gdp ratio having reached a rather high level. Throughout the year, keeping in sight the sharp fluctuations in foreign exchange rates with their consequent negative effects in the real sector and the inflation, the Central Bank also closely watched the real effective exchange rates.

In the second half of the year, as a result of both the improvement observed in the global risk appetite and the improvement of expectations in inflation, the Central Bank increased the amount of liquidity available in the market, and the cost of funding regressed to levels close to the lower band of the interest corridor.

By the end of the year, net domestic assets decreased by TL 9 billion to TL -13 billion. The net foreign assets remained the same at TL 88 billion. The monetary base decreased by 11 percent to TL 75 billion by the end of the year.

Allowance of allocating foreign exchanges and gold for a certain ratio of the required reserves in TL, and particularly, triggering the use of ROC in June 2012, resulted in a considerable rise in the Central Bank's reserves. Foreign exchange reserves of the Central Bank, increasing by USD 5 billion, reached a sum of USD 88 billion in the first half of the year that totaled USD 100 billion by the end of the second half. The Bank's net foreign currency position was USD 44 billion at the end of the year.

The deposits in gold being held subject to the required reserves, and granting the facility of holding a part of the required reserves in gold in 2011 resulted in the Central Bank's gold reserves having reached USD 20 billion in 2012.

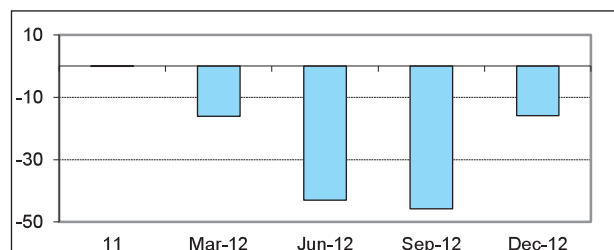

2.5.2. Financial Assets and Demand for Money

The ratio of financial assets to gdp increased by 13 percentage points to 125 percent in 2012. The ratio of demand for money and quasi-money financial assets to gdp rose by 3 percentage points in line with the increase in deposits.

While the ratio of TL equivalent foreign exchange deposits to gdp increased by 1 percentage point, the ratio of TL assets rose by 3 percentage points. Market value of the shares to gdp increased by 10 percentage points.
